"Bienvenue au Grand Prix de Monaco."

"Monaco is a special race for me because it's my home, it's where I've grown-up. I don't know if you know but the way through the tunnel is actually my way to school."

"How do you find it with the radio COMs, how much of a problem is that in Monaco?"

"You know there's a much less capacity for being on the radio, because I'm so much more busy in the racecar, there is not even a straight."

"There are bits where you have to push flat-out and there's other bits where you're just saving the car and letting everyone que up behind you, and we need to get those messages to you but with 19 corners there's almost no way for us to speak without sort of distracting you a bit. We'll spend the whole weekend just watching it we see you get close to the walls and we're just thinking "just be careful with the car" because the walls are so close to the wings and the wheel."

"Just don't tell me that on the radio okay? Let me get on with it."

"For me if I think about Monaco, it's all about risk management the whole weekend. Because as a driver I need to trust my instincts and take risks. But is I take a little bit too much I might put the car in the wall, then the whole weekend is over. And if I don't, I won't be able to win the race. So it's a really fine line between hero or zero."

"I mean for us it's about getting you time in the car as well. So it's all about having a completely clear session every time and building up to it for the big lap in qualifying."

"You're going up the hill and you don't see the corner, you're absolutely blind. And you come over the crest in 7th gear, flat-out nearing 300 km/h and then it's quite a fast corner as well completely blind going into the casino square."

"It's my home Grand Prix and for me it's the highlight of the year. Please keep your fingers crossed for us and I hope you enjoy the Monaco race weekend." >>02:03
